NEW QUESTION: 3You work as a Network Administrator for XYZ CORP. The company has a Windows-based network. You have been assigned the task to design the authentication system for the remote users of the company. For security purposes, you want to issue security tokens to the remote users. The token should work on the one-time password principle and so once used, the next password gets generated.Which of the following security tokens should you issue to accomplish the task?Answer:

Explanation:D is incorrect. Single sign-on software tokens are used by the multiple, related, but independent software systems. Some types of single sign-on (SSO) solutions, like enterprise single sign-on, use this token to store software that allows for seamless authentication and password filling. As the passwords are stored on the token, users need not remember their passwords and therefore can select more secure passwords, or have more secure passwords assigned.
