NEW QUESTION: 2A. Option AB. Option CC. Option BD. Option D Answer: C

NEW QUESTION: 3Which of the following statements about multi-or authentication is true?A. It uses a Key Distribution Center (KDC).B. It protects a computer from malicious software such as worms.C. It involves two or more methods as part of the authentication process.D. It is a process in which a client process and a server are required to prove their identities to each other before performing any application function.Answer: C
Explanation:Multi-or authentication involves a combination of multiple methods of authentication. For example, an authentication method that uses smart cards as well as usernames and passwords can be referred to as multi-or authentication. Answer option D is incorrect. Mutual authentication is a process in which a client process and server are required to prove their identities to each other before performing any application function. The client and server identities can be verified through a trusted third party and use shared secrets as in the case of Kerberos v5. The MS-CHAP v2 and EAPTLS authentication methods support mutual authentication. Answer option A is incorrect. Kerberos authentication uses a Key Distribution Center (KDC). Answer option B is incorrect. The multi-or authentication method cannot protect a computer from malicious software such as worms. What is a worm? A worm is a software program that uses computer networks and security holes to replicate itself from one computer to another. It usually performs malicious actions, such as using the resources of computers as well as shutting down computers.

NEW QUESTION: 4A cluster is running OneFS v6.0. The customer attempts to add a node to the cluster that is running OneFS v5.5.6. How will the cluster respond when the node is added? A. The cluster will take no action. Different OneFS versions on nodes within a single cluster do not cause any issues. B. The cluster will automatically reimage the node to match the cluster's OneFS version. C. You will be prompted to download to downgrade the cluster to OneFS v5.5.6 to match the newly added node. D. The cluster will take no action. The cluster does not perform a OneFS version check on new nodes. Answer: B
