NEW QUESTION: 1What is a global command?A. a command that can be entered in any configuration modeB. a command that is universal in application and supports all protocolsC. a command that is set once and affects the entire routerD. a command that is available in every release of IOS, regardless of the version or deployment statusE. a command that is implemented in all foreign and domestic IOS versionsAnswer: C*Explanation:When you enter global configuration mode and enter a command, it is applied to the running configuration file that is currently running in ram. The configuration of a global command affects the entire router. An example of a global command is one used for the hostname of the router.Incorrect Answers:A. Global configuration commands must be performed while in global configuration mode. For example, when you are in the interface configuration mode, you most likely will need to exit out into global mode to type in the commands.B. Global commands do not necessarily support every protocol.C. This is not necessarily true, since there are certain global commands that are supported on one feature set that are not on a different feature set of IOS.E. Global commands can become outdated, and can be replaced by newer commands in the newer releases of IOS.

NEW QUESTION: 2P's age is twice Q's age. One year ago, R's age was exactly half of P's age at that time.A. The quantity in Column B is greater;B. The quantity in Column A is greater;C. The quantities are equal;D. The relationship cannot be determined from the information given.Answer: A Explanation: Explanation/Reference:Explanation:You can approach this problem intuitively, without a written system of equations. If P's age were twice what R's age is now, then Q's age would equal R's age, and the correct answer would be choice (C). R's current age must be greater than half of P's (because one year ago R's age was exactly half of P's). Given that Q's age is exactly half of P's age, R must be older than Q.
