NEW QUESTION: 1

Service A carries out XML canonicalization and creates a message digest. It then encrypts the message digest using asymmetric encryption. Service B. upon receiving the message, decrypts the message hash and calculates the hash of the original message. However, upon comparison, the received message digest and the calculated message digest do not match. How can this problem be avoided?

A. Transforms need to be used so that Service B is provided the sequence of actions used by Service A.

That way, Service B will know that it has to perform XML canonicalization on the original message first, then calculate its hash, and only then compare it against the decrypted message hash

B. None of the above

C. XML canonicalization should not be performed because it is the cause of the mismatch and will also unnecessarily increase the message size

D. Transforms need to be used so that Service B is provided the sequence of actions used by Service A.

That way, Service B will know that it has to calculate the original message's hash first, and then perform XML canonicalization on the original message, and only then compare it against the decrypted message hash

NEW QUESTION: 3

HOTSPOT

You have a Microsoft SQL Server Integration Services (SSIS) package that contains a Data Flow task as shown in the Data Flow exhibit. (Click the Exhibit button.)

You install Data Quality Services (DQS) on the same server that hosts SSIS and deploy a knowledge base to manage customer email addresses. You add a DQS Cleansing transform to the Data Flow as shown in the Cleansing exhibit. (Click the Exhibit button.)

You create a Conditional Split transform as shown in the Splitter exhibit. (Click the Exhibit button.)

You need to split the output of the DQS Cleansing task to obtain only Correct values from the EmailAddress column. For each of the following statements, select Yes if the statement is true. Otherwise, select No.

Answer :

Explanation:

Explanation:

The DQS Cleansing component takes input records, sends them to a DQS server, and gets them back corrected. The component can output not only the corrected data, but also additional columns that may be useful for you. For example - the status columns. There is one status column for each mapped field, and another one that aggregated the status for the whole record. This record status column can be very useful in some scenarios, especially when records are further processed in different ways depending on their status.

In such cases, it is recommended to use a Conditional Split component below the DQS Cleansing component, and configure it to split the records to groups based on the record status (or based on other columns such as specific field status).
